Letter from the Vice President for Outreach and Global Initiatives

Courtesy of Thomas Venkatesan

Dear Reader:
As a leading Land Grant university, the University of Arizona is grounded upon principles of distributed innovation and empowering individuals to participate in the transformation of society. This covenant, to exist at the frontier of empowering innovation, must be viewed through the lens of global relationships and global impact: at no time has our mandate been more clear.

To better serve the UA's global mission, our Division of International Affairs has evolved into the Office of Global Initiatives (OGI). Global Initiatives will continue to facilitate Study Abroad, International Partnerships, International Students, Faculty and Scholars and UA Passports, as before, but will also facilitate innovative programs and services to help advance the global impact of our faculty, students and alumni. More to come!

Along those lines, OGI is supporting International Education Week (IEW). IEW is a joint initiative of the U.S. Departments of Education and State, celebrating understanding and collaboration across cultures. One of IEW's primary purposes is "to inspire students to broaden their horizons through global learning, foreign languages and international exchange. ...There is no longer any doubt that local actions have international effects and consequences." U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan.

Specifically at the University of Arizona, International Education Week (IEW) provides a platform to champion global awareness across our campus, and community-wide.

Explore new ideas. Attend the "Dual Degree" and "Conditional Admits" sessions referenced on the back page of this newsletter. The Office of Global Initiatives is ready to support your global efforts.

Sincerely,

Mike Proctor, J.D.

Vice President, Outreach and Global Initiatives

Education Around the World

This year marks the 12th annual celebration of International Education Week. From November 14 – 18, 2011, institutions around the globe will be highlighting the role of education in developing future leaders for a global society. This year's theme is International Education: Inspiring Students Locally to Succeed Globally. According to a statement released by U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan, "President Obama and I are passionate about providing all of our children with an education that will enable them to succeed in a globally competitive economy where knowledge and innovation are more important than ever. And, with the world's economies and societies becoming more and more interdependent, it is almost impossible to distinguish between domestic and international issues."

Secretary Duncan continued, "Therefore, we must work together to give all of our students an outstanding education, which includes learning about our global partners – their cultures, histories, languages, values, and viewpoints. We must focus on integrating international perspectives into our classrooms. It is through education and exchange that we become better collaborators, competitors and compassionate neighbors in this global society. There is no longer any doubt that local actions have international effects and consequences. International Education Week 2011 is a time to celebrate our connection with the world around us."

Around the world, education plays a key role in educating the future leaders of the 21st century. Four events focusing on the role of education in Kazakhstan, Saudi Arabia, the United States and Latin America will take place at the University of Arizona in recognition of this important celebration of international education and exchange.

International Education Week is a joint initiative of the U.S. Departments of Education and State. It celebrates the benefits of understanding the world around us so we can better communicate and collaborate with others from different cultures. It is an ideal opportunity to inspire students to broaden their horizons through global learning, foreign languages and international exchange. Please join us for these and any of the myriad of events that will be taking place on campus during this national celebration. A detailed calendar of events is listed on pages 2 – 3 of this newsletter and can also be found at <http://international.arizona.edu/iew>.

Globalization brings individuals in contact with one another at an unprecedented scale and has also brought forth a general challenge to traditionally recognized boundaries of nation, language, race, gender, and class. For those living within this rapidly changing social landscape, intercultural competence (IC)—the ability to recognize and understand relationships between cultures—is a necessary skill, and the cultivation of such intercultural individuals falls on the shoulders of today's educators.

This conference brings together researchers and practitioners across languages, levels, and settings to discuss research, theory, and best practices and to foster meaningful professional dialogue. With keynote speaker Heidi Byrnes (Georgetown University) and plenary presentations selected by national Language Resource Centers and Area Studies Centers, the conference also features papers submitted from across the nation and around the world. A series of pre-and post-conference professional development workshops completes the schedule.

New Options for Student Mobility

Recent trends in higher education indicate that incorporating an experience abroad into their academic program is becoming increasingly sought after by today's students. The definition of mobility has changed from the traditional junior year abroad to include a wide variety of options such as semester exchange, faculty-led study abroad, internships abroad, and more recently dual degree programs and transfer articulation or "2+2's".

The University of Arizona (UA) has piloted several different types of dual degree programs and established a "conditional admission" mechanism which allows international graduate students to perfect their English language skills on campus prior to entering into a UA graduate degree program. More information about these opportunities will be presented at two different sessions during International Education Week. These sessions are free and open to the campus community.
